What do you do when you get a headache, toothache, or fever? Well, if you go to the doctor, there is a good chance that he or she will give you medicine with at least some aspirin in it. Aspirin is a drug that has become more and more popular because it can help people with many ailments (病痛). Today, about 40,000 metric tons (公噸) of aspirin are consumed (消耗) each year, and it has become one of the most widely used medications in the world.

Most people use aspirin as an analgesic (止痛劑) to stop pain. Therefore, most headache tablets and painkiller medicines have aspirin in them. It is also used as an antipyretic (退熱劑) to stop a fever. Many cold and flu medicines also have aspirin in them. Moreover, small amounts of aspirin taken every day can help prevent heart attacks, strokes, blood clot formation, and even cancer. It does this by making the blood thinner, so the blood can move around the body more easily.

Is aspirin dangerous? Does aspirin have side effects? Aspirin is a drug, and like any other drug, it can be quite dangerous. Several hundred people die each year from taking too much aspirin. High doses of aspirin may cause stomach ulcers (潰瘍) and stomach bleeding and tinnitus (耳鳴). People suffering from gout (痛風) are advised not to take low-dose aspirin, commonly referred to as baby aspirin (81mg), because it decreases uric acid (尿酸) excretion (排泄). Aspirin has also been removed from children's cold and flu medicines because sometimes children die from taking aspirin.

Overall, aspirin is usually not dangerous for adults if it is taken in small amounts. Many people get help for various ailments by taking a tablet that contains aspirin. It is truly an amazing drug.
